Collective Impact Initiatives

Both United for Children and Mission United are incorporating principles of Mobility Mentoring into their collaborative efforts to support children and veterans.

Community Investments

We are supporting our agencies and partners in applying best practices of Mobility Mentoring to begin transforming their service delivery.

We LIVE UNITED, for our community.

Helping people change their lives requires strategy and collaboration. So, we adopted an approach called Mobility Mentoring[®] – an innovative, new model grounded in brain science and best practices. This game-changing approach helps participants set individualized roadmaps and uses intensive coaching that keeps them from sliding back into crisis and instead moving forward along a path toward self-sufficiency.

Mobility Mentoring is the new world of human services – changing case managers to coaches and mentors. Instead of focusing on whether a person qualifies for a specific service, mentors connect participants with the right resources to help them become stable and eventually self-sufficient.

It is no longer enough to give people training, housing, transportation or other safety net services – to truly transform our society, we have to give people the ability to navigate and lead their own lives.
